

The Natural History Museum, London - business or pleasure, sir?

Paul Clark

*Decapod Consultant, Natural History Museum, London
Honorary Research Associate, RMBR, NUS*

About twenty-five years ago an article on heart attacks appeared in the medical journal The Lancet. The author acknowledged that the profession least likely to suffer such a seizure was the museum curator! How life has changed from dusty image to vibrant extrovert for this world-renowned institute. The NHM is now expected to raise additional income, maintain its position as one the UK's leading visitor attractions and continue to produce innovative research. This presentation will include a report on the invasions of the Thames by the Chinese mitten crab Eriocheir sinensis. Bring your own beta blockers.

Date: 1 Aug 2003, Friday
Time: 4 - 5 pm
Venue: LT 20
Host: A/P Peter Ng

All are welcome

NUS
National University of Singapore

Department of Biological Sciences
Seminar Announcement